Messrs Winchester and Williams, practical watchmakers and jewellers, (late of Masterton), who have opened a business in the above line in Oxford street (opposite Harvey and Co.'s furniture warehouse), watchmakers and jewellers, of long experience in leading establishments, and are starting here determined to give those who will favour them with their patronage, expert workmanship, reasonable prices and civility. A special feature of the new business is that the firm give a written guarantee with every watch overhauled by them. Also they are determined to turn out all work promptly—a feature that will be appreciated by all having watches and jewellery needing repairs.

LDC 2 Jun 1917

Mr W. L. Williams, watchmaker and jeweller, Levin, has acquired his late partner's interest in the business of Winchester and Williams, Levin. Mr Winchester has gone on active service, and in another column of to-day's Chronicle he bespeaks for his late partner (who is ineligible for military service) a continuation of the public support accorded to the partnership.

In my absence at the front, the business will be carried on by Mr W. L. Williams, who is ineligible for military service, and I trust that the Public will still extend to it the same degree of support that was given us in the past.
